

Webinar 24: Enriching the Delivery of Child Protection Education

Linda Woolcock, Department of Education

With the global interest in Child Protection Education, Linda Woolcock works with international schools across the world providing advice, professional development, and support. Linda is also the Child Protection Curriculum manager with the Department for Education, South Australia. For the past 10 years, Linda has provided leadership in the department's Keeping Safe: Child Protection Curriculum for educators in South Australia and more broadly across Australia and overseas.

Linda provides high level advice to government and non-government organisations, curriculum review, research, resource development and best practice advice for school implementation. Linda has extensive experience as a primary school principal with a strong focus on pedagogical practices, rigorous learning, and student engagement. Her teaching experience ranges from early to secondary years in city and rural schools.

This work focusses on the development and implementation of a child safety and respectful relationships curriculum, providing expert advice, and building teacher capacity in its delivery to children and young people.
